

The filtering controls are initially hidden and can actually be scrolled "out of the way" when you drag-up to scroll down the list. To me, this really is the best of both worlds; initially the screen layout is optimized to show the maximum number of contacts, but by dragging-down to get to the top of the list, you can "uncover" the filtering controls. I'm a fan, but will David be one too?

A search control enables a "dynamic search" – you start typing and the results are immediately filtered in the list below.

It seems to me that the combination of 1) the A-Z Index control, 2) some form of Filtering (All, Selected, Unselected), and 3) a Search control, might offer a solution for most searching "problems", but it would be good to get your feedback David!

cover the use-cases well.

David's response: "Agreed". This solution does seem to
